GUIDELINES ON THE CONDUCT OF CLASSES
FIRST SEMESTER, AY 2023- 2024

As a general guideline, the UP Asian Center will continue holding classes partly online and partly onsite for the new academic year 2023-2024. Instructors shall conduct a minimum of three (3) face-to-face classes for each course and cover the rest of the course via online or asynchronous sessions. The number of face-to-face classes in relation to online sessions will depend on the pedagogical preference of the instructor and the particular circumstances of students enrolled in the class.

Here are additional guidelines on the conduct of classes:

1. Instructors are advised to schedule their face-to-face classes either in the first three (3) weeks and/or last three (3) weeks of the semester. This is to minimize travel cost to students.
2. To properly guide students, the format or mode of instruction for each class shall be published in the CRS. Instructors may select from the following formats or modes of instruction: a) scheduled face-to-face classes; mostly online sessions; b) full face-to-face classes; c) combination of face-to-face, online and asynchronous sessions.
3. The Asian Center, the College of Arts and Letters and the College of Social Sciences and Philosophy have their own guidelines on the conduct of classes. Classes taken under the programs of these three colleges (and other units) may have a different format or mode of delivery. Students are encouraged to inquire about this matter with the concerned department or unit.
